

Australian Studies Copenhagen,
Distinguished Visiting Chair, 2015

Call for applications

The Centre for Australian Studies at the University of Copenhagen invites applications for a Visiting Professorship in 2015. The Distinguished Visiting Chair in Australian Studies was founded in 2006, with the generous financial assistance of the Australian Government Department of Education. The appointment is for the European autumn semester of each year (five months from September to January), and the position is next available from 1 September 2015. The post comes with a travel, accommodation and subsistence allowance worth up to AUD 25,000. Office and computer facilities will also be provided by the University.

The Chair holder is required to teach one course at postgraduate level in a subject area of his or her choice. This entails the delivery of one two-hour per week seminar over a period of 14 weeks, beginning in the first week of September with a one week break in mid-October. The Chair holder will also be responsible for examining the course in early January. Additionally, the Chair holder will be expected to take part in the activities of the Centre, and present a research paper at an appropriate time at one of our departmental seminars.

The position is open to scholars currently serving at an Australian University in one or more disciplines of relevance to Australian Studies, including but not limited to Literature, History, Politics, International Relations, Film and Media Studies.

Applicants are invited to submit the following documentation, collated into one pdf document, in the following order:

- An informal letter of introduction
- A table of contents for the application
